UCDB and WWF formalize partnership for development of sustainability actions

Donation of 50 software licenses transforming Geoprocessing Laboratory into one of the most modern of the Country

Partnership between Don Bosco Catholic University and the non-governmental organization WWF Brazil will allow actions to exchange knowledge, spatial analysis and cartographic production, promotion of training, development of technical and scientific works, publications and events focused on nature conservation. The agreement was made possible through the Agency of Innovation and Entrepreneurship of the Catholic (S-Inova).

One such action was the donation of 50 licenses for a five-year period from ArcGis software - one of the most modern and widely used geoprocessing software worldwide.

The Dean of UCDB, Fr. Ricardo Carlos highlighted the partnership as a way to put into practice the actions aiming at the sustainability of the planet. “The sustainability banner is very important. However, it is often used politically or for other purposes. Ours is education - we must educate the new generations so that everyone can put into practice simple but concrete actions. “

According to Professor Fábio Martins Ayres, they will participate in the actions and academic studies of undergraduate courses (Sanitary and Environmental Engineering, Civil Engineering, Agronomy, Biology and Architecture) and stricto sensu postgraduate studies (Environmental Sciences and Agricultural and Livestock Sustainability and Local Development) . “In addition to preparing the student to use a modern program, many scientific works may result from these analyzes obtained with the software”, he said. This month, a training course was held at UCDB with the participation of technicians from municipal and state bodies (Imasul, Agesul, Planurb, City Council, PMA, Sedesc, Fire Brigade and Military Police).

Course on the new software was carried out at UCDB
